

International Studies

In an increasingly globalized world, international knowledge is an asset to any profession.

International Studies is an interdisciplinary program that combines courses in Political Studies, History, Economics, and several other disciplines.

An International Studies degree helps you understand global context and work toward answers for some of the world's most demanding questions.

With four different streams to choose from you are sure to find your fit in International studies.

Our courses are presented from historical and contemporary perspectives and challenge you to learn about the changing dynamics of the international society. You will learn from the expertise of specialized professors about topics such as war, foreign policy, globalization, economic disparity, and international development.

As part of the major, we encourage our students to study abroad in order to put what they learn in the classroom into practice. There are also many ways to get involved on campus, including student-led initiatives such as TWU's Refugee Awareness Campaign or participation in Model United Nations.

International Studies majors typically find employment in international non-governmental organizations (NGOs), government, law, missions, or in providing other services in the global community.

OUR INTERNATIONAL STUDIES PROGRAM OFFERS:

An International Studies major leading to a BA or BA honours with four streams:

- International Affairs and Global Policy
- International Development and Cultural Change
- International Political Economy

ANTH 101	ANTH 101 - Introduction to Cultural Anthropology 2022-2023	3
	Introduction to the general field of anthropology, including reviews of scientific theories as basis of the academic research, as well as social, cultural, ethnographic and methodological topics which refer to the discipline. The course includes a study of diversity and similarity of behavior patterns, values, traditions, economical systems and customs of people in different cultural contexts- present and past. The focus will be to enhance students understanding of human nature. This will be derived from the investigation of the variety and range of socially standardized responses to the circumstances of human living. Such insight transcends a culture- bound approach, which views things from the narrow perspective of one's native cultural background. In each aspect of human culture this introduction seeks to provide an appreciation of other cultures as well an
